NOT YET NOR SOON; NO WORD FROM MR. AYCOCK ABOUT RACE

Ex-Governor Not Expected to Make Announcement of His Plans Soon, if at all—More Interest in Boys Corn Clubs—Illicit Distillers are Many.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, April 18.—The recent declaration of United States Senator Simmons in favor of a primary in 1912 for the settlement of the contest within the Democratic party for the senatorship as between he and Governor Kitchen and where else may come out has quickened lagging interest in the situation in which so many Democrats are insisting that there must be political quiet until this issue is due in 1912. However, it is recognized that the issue is up through force of circumstances and must be dealt with. There is some talk of the possibility of ex-Governor Aycock declaring his candidacy within the next few weeks, but those who are surmising as to this have to take into account the positive declaration of Governor Aycock very recently that he would not undertake such a campaign so long drawn out as this would be for now until the primary is to be held for the greatest office at all. Indeed, he made it clear that he would not get into such a campaign for several months to come. He is being deeply impressed by the appeals that are coming to him to stand for the senatorship but close friends of the ex-Governor do not believe there will be any announcement from him for some time yet, months in fact.

The Corporation Commission heard today brick manufacturers and railroad freight managers on the question of a proposed readjustment of the freight rates of brick, an issue developed through the recent proceedings in the Goldsboro-Durham "internal improvement" rates that the commission eliminated. The railroads oppose any scaling of rates to anything like the basis that the Durham-Goldsboro rate was on. The brick manufacturers asked simply for uniformity so that brickyards the state over would have an equal showing. The commission has the matter under advisement. Here for the railroads were Freight Agent Chalmers, Seaboard Air Line; General Freight Agent G. R. Browder, Atlanta, Seaboard Air Line; Division Freight Agent Jno. Andrews of the Southern and Freight Agent S. L. Gill, of the Norfolk & Southern. Brickmen here were Mr. Strudwick, Hillsboro; H. L. Grant, and H. Weil, Goldsboro.

A charter was granted today for The City Realty Co., Charlotte, capital $50,000, by J. H. McAden, T. G. McAden and S. Y. McAden for real estate and brokerage business.

There was presented to the Corporation Commission today a contest from Thomasville between citizens and the Southern Railway Company over the specifications for a new passenger station for that town. The railroad company had prepared plans for a station that complaining citizens believe includes too small a waiting room for the white people. Mayor Burgen was here today before the commission in the interest of the citizens and the interests of the Southern in the matter were represented by General Superintendent Hutelings, of Greensboro. The commission will make an order later.

Capt. T. B. Parker, in charge of the boys' corn division of the State Department of Agriculture, says that the indications now are that the number of boys enlisted in this contest for 1911 will very much exceed the number last year when there were 1,154 in 74 of the counties of the State. He has already enrolled a number of boys in counties that were not represented last year and it looks like every county in the State will be represented this time. Capt. Parker is also in charge of the farmer's institute work and says the interest in these is steadily increasing. Some scattering institutes are being held now, the season being too busy with the farmers for much effort in this direction. However, regular series of institutes will be

NON SUIT

In Case of Shaw vs. City of Greensboro--Big Damage Suit.

In Guilford Superior court yesterday morning Judge Daniels sustained a motion to nonsuit the case of J. T. B. Shaw vs. City of Greensboro, from which decision the plaintiff appealed to the Supreme court. The suit was to recover damages in the sum of $4,080 from the city because of an ordinance passed compelling him to move a wooden lumber plant from within the fire district of the city. Mr. Shaw had erected a plant on Lewis street and the building inspector required him to move it outside the fire limits. In sustaining the motion to nonsuit the case the court held that the contents of the defense that the building inspector was acting under state laws and that therefore the city was not liable.

Mrs. Gealie Michael was granted an absolute divorce from T. B. Michael. The case of J. N. Benton, admr., vs. North Carolina Public Service Company was taken up late in the afternoon and the evidence for the plaintiff introduced. When the plaintiff rested the defendant moved to nonsuit the case on the grounds that the defendant was not responsible for the death of the son of the plaintiff. The argument on the motion to nonsuit had not been concluded when court adjourned for the day. The suit is to recover damages in the sum of $15,000 because of the death of William Bryan Benton, the thirteen year old son of the plaintiff, who in June, 1909, climbed a tree on Eugene street and was instantly killed by striking a finger and knee against electric wires of the defendant company.

SHARPSHOOTERS ARE GATHERED IN RALEIGH.

The crack target team from Company 3, Coast Artillery, N. C. N. G., known as the Guilford Greys, has gone to Raleigh to participate in the target practice in the rifle range at that place. Lieut. Brewer was in command of the team and the boys were confident of making creditable scores compared to those of the other teams participating.

HACK DRIVER THROWN OUT OF CARRIAGE IN RUNAWAY.

While returning from the ball game yesterday afternoon the horses driven by Alf Waugh, a negro hack driver, became frightened and threw the driver out, both wheels on one side passing over him. The negro's head was bruised and lacerated, but beyond that he was not badly hurt. The occupants of the carriage got out post haste when they saw what had happened to the driver, preferring to walk rather than run the risk of getting bounced out. The horses ran about a block before they were stopped.

YESTERDAY WAS BLIND TIGER DAY IN DURHAM

Forty Persons Charged With Selling Liquor Rounded Up by Detectives in Dukeville—Both White and Negro Detectives Employed.

Durham, N. C., April 18.—Blind tigers in two's and three's, and squads and battalions were escorted before his honor, Judge Sykes, this morning, the whole number being something above two score. To make this possible the entire police force, all of the county officers and a number of reserve minions of the law were brought into service during the midnight hours of last night to serve the warrants. To secure these warrants four men, tried and true, employed by the Raleigh detective agency, worked for ten days or more frequenting the dark and hidden places of the city at untimely hours, gathering together more than three suitcases of the fiery liquid purchased in a clandestine manner, which fiery liquid was used as evidence before his honor this morning, resulting in the conviction of a small army of the defendants, all of which convicted defendants were given sentences of six months—some more, some less.

By whom the detectives were employed and under whose authority they were operating has not yet been determined. It is known that they came to Durham on the 8th day of April. It is known that they frequented the near-beer saloons and hidden places about the city, always going in pairs, and that they purchased whiskey of all brands and in divers places. It is known further that a careful record of each transaction was kept, the amount purchased, the exact hour and place at which the transaction took place was carefully recorded, and as a further precaution the liquid itself, in the original package, was carefully marked with the foregoing data and safely stowed away to await the final hour of triumph, which occurred in the recorder's court this morning. As the result of the operations of the detectives, 40 or more warrants were issued late Monday evening. These warrants were quietly placed in the hands of the duly constituted minions of the law at a late hour last night and the haul was made. The victims of the raid are about equally divided between the races. Two detectives of African descent operated amongst the colored tigers, while two white men operated amongst the tigers of white skins. A large number of the offenders put up the cash necessary for their release last night, but an equally large number spent the night in the unattractive cells of the police station.

Sunday School Association Meet In High Point

Arrangements are about completed for the annual meeting of the North Carolina Sunday School Association which will be held in High Point next week. Secretary Carter states that the High Point people are preparing to give the delegates a royal time, arrangements having been made to entertain four hundred. The interest in the Guilford County day continues to increase and it is believed that fully five hundred workers from all parts of the county will be in the line of march on Thursday, April 27. The fare for the round trip will be fifty cents. The young ladies of High Point are arranging to provide a fine dinner at moderate cost for the excursionists.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY OHIO SUPREME COURT.

Columbus, O., April 18.—The Supreme Court today decided in favor of the Union Central Life Insurance Company of Cincinnati in the case brought by the Attorney General to prevent the company from distributing by stock issue $400,000 of their surplus funds among the stockholders. The Attorney General contended that the money belonged to the policyholders and not to the stockholders.

TRAIN

Service Ruling Expected Today--Decision Affects Schedules to Greensboro.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, April 18.—The Corporation Commission will announce tomorrow its ruling in the matter of additional train service by the A. C. L. between Wilmington and Goldsboro, through either an extension of the Norfolk-Goldsboro Shoo-fly to Wilmington or inauguration of a new local train to leave Wilmington for Goldsboro in the early morning.

The railroad company has strongly opposed any change in the present service in vogue many years, and Superintendent of Transportation E. Borden and Assistant General Counsel Elliott have just held a final conference with the Commission about the matter. Involved are important proposed connections for Raleigh and Greensboro.

MONUMENT TO FRENCH SOLDIERS OF THE REVOLUTION

Annapolis, Md., April 18.—On the campus of St. John College, there was unveiled here today a bronze tablet erected by the General Society of the Sons of the Revolution to the memory of the nameless French soldiers and sailors who in 1781 laid down their lives in the cause of American independence. President Taft and Ambassador Jusserand both made formal addresses. The midshipmen of the National Naval Academy did not turn out in honor of those who prevented the capture and probable sack of Annapolis, but representatives of the Sons of the Revolution from all parts of the country, the Society of the Cincinnati, the Maryland Historical Society and the Daughters of the American Revolution were in attendance.

The monument is a simple shaft of pink granite thirteen feet high, bearing on one face a bronze entablature in alto relieve, seven feet, seventeen inches wide by three feet nine inches high. The composition shows sorrowing memory, crowned with the olive leaves of peace and leaning upon her victorious shield, watching the departure of a small group of marching soldiers, and it is interesting to note how much more subtle in suggestion is this treatment than the more usual one of troops confronting the spectator.

Fraud Practiced in New Jersey Election

Trenton, N. J., April 18.—The special assembly committee appointed to investigate the election in Atlantic county last November reported to the house today that it found there was false registration, illegal voting and purchase of votes, and that election officers of the county failed to do their duty. It is estimated by the committee that from the testimony taken there were approximately two thousand illegal registrations and one thousand illegal votes. The report states that the testimony of the 600 witnesses heard has been submitted to the proper officers of Atlantic county for legal prosecution of the offenders and the committee says, it is assumed that these officers will do their duty.

It is stated in the report that the officeholders in Atlantic county were required to contribute to the Republican campaign fund and the committee further states in the report it is satisfied that "the misconduct and corruption herein before set forth whether or not it was in obedience to the instructions of the leaders of the political party in power in Atlantic county at least, could have been prevented by them and to that extent they are chargeable with the responsibility therefor."

RALEIGH MAY HAVE ONE MAN GOVERNMENT

Instead of Commission Form City Has Placed in Power of One Man to Control Municipal Action—Unique Condition of Affairs Results from Primary.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, April 18.—Of the five aldermen landed by the "good government" forces in the strenuous municipal campaign just closed, four are renominations. The fifth alderman who holds the unique position of providing the controlling majority on the board, is Alexander Webb, of the North Carolina Home Insurance Company. Indeed, it is figured out here that the primary results have brought about the placing of the real control of the city in the hands of one man as Mr. Webb can swing any issue as he pleases through voting with his "good government" colleagues or turning to the minority three and making a tie vote that Mayor Johnson would speedily break against the good government forces.

The five aldermen are all that the "good government" forces saved in the contest. Indeed there is one of the "good government" candidates, Alderman Ellington, declared renominated when there is an opposing candidate who received a goodly number more votes than he. This was Walters who, unfortunately for him, had two others of his ward to receive more votes than he did, thus eliminating him and leaving a man with fewer votes the city over to hold the nomination.

It is a notable fact that J. Sherwood Upchurch, against whom the bitterest fight was made by the "good government" forces, received the greatest number of votes of any candidate for alderman, 1040; while the next highest was 970 by W. A. Cooper of the "good government" candidates.

There is general gratification that the primaries were pulled off yesterday with so little trouble. In fact none to speak of. The delay in counting the vote was a source of much complaint. It was midnight before the results in the various precincts were available.

The women in charge guaranteed Miss Gould that she should not be annoyed if she would come here and take part in the deliberations of the meeting.

CONDITION

Along Mexican Border Discussed by Tar Heel From El Paso.

Charlotte, April 18.—A very interesting visitor in the city this morning was Mr. J. W. Harrison, of Mooresville, who has left the Mexican frontier and who was enroute to Mooresville to visit relatives.

Mr. Harrison has spent two years at El Paso, Texas, and was previous to that in the regular army service, having spent most of three years in Cuba. He is conversant with Spanish-American life to an unusual degree and talked very interestingly of the present disturbance in Mexico.

He witnessed the recent battle between the Mexican federal troops and the insurgents at Juraz, just across the Rio Grande river from El Paso. The town of Juarez, he says, has some 12,000 inhabitants and is situated on a bluff on the opposite side of the river from El Paso, Texas, thus allowing the people of El Paso an almost unobstructed view of the battle.

The talk of war and the present uprising, he says, is the sole topic of conversation along the border. Many Americans are engaged with the insurgent forces and the sympathies of the majority of Americans is with them. There is constant crossing of Americans to the Mexican side and Mexicans to the American side, although Uncle Sam is making vigilant effort to preserve neutrality and prevent Americans from aiding either one of the belligerents. This, however, is almost impossible, from the fact that several towns of considerable size are very closely associated in business interests and otherwise with the towns on the opposite side. For example, El Paso and Juarez are connected by trolley and are virtually almost one town.

The surveillance of the American authorities is increasing. Mr. Harrison says, in the effort to prevent shipment of arms or other munitions across the river into Mexican territory and is becoming more strict since the battle line has come so close to the border. Where, when the American troops first mobilized at the front they were at liberty to cross the river while off duty, that right is now prohibited them and an American soldier is never seen on Mexican soil, unless he slips across in civilian clothes.

The Mexicans themselves are not very friendly to the Americans, and a large number who have gone across the border, bent on getting pictures with the camera, have been imprisoned. This feeling is explained by the fact that most of the Americans who venture over the border are mere soldiers of fortune and are not deeply concerned about the principles at stake in the revolution.

Most of the insurgents, Mr. Harrison states, are from the Mexican middle class, most of the wealthy ranchmen, mine owners and other capitalists, remaining faithful to the Diaz government. The leaders of the insurgents, however, the three Madero brothers, and a few other leaders, are an exception to this rule. The Madero brothers are understood to be vastly wealthy, and have large holdings in American as well as Mexican mining stocks. The father of the Madero brothers lives in El Paso and has striven to persuade his warlike sons to consider peace proposals, but without avail.

Mr. Harrison says he was reluctant to leave El Paso at this juncture and believes that if another dispatch reading like the account of the battle of Agua Prieta yesterday were to come today he would be tempted to take the first train back to that point.—Charlotte News.

UNCLE SAM MAY OPERATE MINE AS EXPERIMENT

Washington, April 18.—A government-operated mine to be run not for profit but to obtain scientific data will begin operations about May 1 when the new experimental coal mining plant at Bruceton, Pa., near Pittsburg, is opened. Scientific men and mining experts will experiment under actual mining conditions to obtain for the United States bureau of mines information which they hope will be useful in the prevention of such terrible loss of life as took place in the Panoast mine at Throop, Pa., the Banner mine at Littleton, Ala., and in the disaster at Cherry, Ill.

REBELS RETREATED FROM AGUA PRIETA BUT RENEWED BATTLE

Insurrectos Eluded Federals and Left the Town—Latter Now Occupying It—Rebels Are Seen Advancing Again and Battle is Renewed at Long Range.

Agua Prieta, Mexico, April 18.—The rebel army, after almost 18 hours of incessant fighting yesterday in defense of Agua Prieta, quietly evacuated the town during the night. It moved silently, and when day broke was nowhere to be seen. The Mexican national troops entered the city at dawn, encountering no resistance.

The federals approached the town from the south and east during the early hours, coming in slowly and cautiously lest they encounter an ambush. Great was the surprise of the commanders of the government troops on finding, when they reached the outer works of the rebel entrenchments, that the trenches had been abandoned and no insurgents were in sight. The federals continued to come in, still more slowly, presumably expecting at every moment to encounter a surprise, but they found no rebels anywhere. The latter had vanished as completely as the night. There was no indication even of the direction they had taken.

The reason for their evacuation of the city after their all-day defense of it was not at first apparent.

The most logical conclusion seems to be that they had exhausted their ammunition.

Battle Renewed.

Agua Prieta, Mexico, April 18.—The battle was renewed here this afternoon when three columns of rebels, believed to be under command of Juan Cabral, advanced from the west to attack the town. It is thought that Cabral effected a junction with the forces which evacuated the town last night. When the rebels were seen advancing the federal garrison opened fire upon them at long range.

Still Seeking Peace With Madero.

Chihuahua, Mexico, April 18.—Francisco, Ernesto and Alfonso Madero and Rafael Hernandez, composing an unofficial peace commission, arrived here this afternoon. They will seek an interview with Francisco Madero, Jr., and endeavor to have him modify his views so as to permit of official negotiations for the securing of peace to Mexico.

Sixth Cavalry Goes To Front.

By Publishers' Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 18.—The Sixth Cavalry left here this afternoon in three special trains for the Mexican border, going over the Rock Island Railroad. The regiment is going to Douglas, Ariz. Lieutenant Colonel O'Connor is in command.

Federals Holding Agua Prieta.

By Publishers' Press.

Agua Prieta, Mexico, April 18.—At nightfall it was undetermined whether the federal troops under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Diaz would retain the undisputed possession of the city, which the rebels evacuated early this morning, or whether the rebels, with the assistance of reinforcements which appeared on the scene this afternoon, would start another battle. The federals today brought into the bull ring at Agua Prieta 25 federals who were wounded in yesterday's battle. In official reports given out by Col. Diaz the total dead and injured on both sides in yesterday's battle was about fifty.

Proposal For Armistice.

By Publishers' Press.

Mexico City, April 18.—A proposal for an armistice was received today by the Mexican government from the official organization of the Maderists. It is said tonight that the armistice is asked for to avoid international complications and is evidently caused by apprehension that the United States will take a hand in the mix-up. If the fighting continues so close to the border line. The government has replied that it will be glad to receive and consider any formal proposal for the cessation of hostilities.

Congressman Claude Kitchen is a tariff reformer and a tariff reformer. His opening speech on Canadian reciprocity is attracting attention throughout the country.

The number of shots which strayed over the line into this country from Mexico during the battle of Agua Prieta indicate that the federal and insurrecto armies are composed largely of poor marksmen.

It is high time the Mexican revolution was halted. A number of fatalities have been reported—men on both sides have actually been killed. It is doubtful if the insurrectos planned in the beginning to pull off such a destructive and dangerous revolution as this one has proven to be. The war dogs should be called off and the insurrectos should begin again and try the harmless revolution, which was introduced years ago into that section and has been immensely popular ever since.

The Charlotte News asked the apparently innocent question, "When is a man dead?" and the Greenville Piedmont answered by saying that a man was dead when he landed in Spartanburg. Then the Spartanburg Herald jumped into the controversy, saying that a man who had acquired land in Spartanburg was in a position to begin to live. The Herald's opinion is entirely irrelevant, of course; but while the subject of land is up, it may be remarked that the best place in the Carolinas to secure farm land is in Charlotte. There is more of it in Charlotte than in any other Carolina city, consequently it is cheaper.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF GENERAL JACKSON.

It seems there is never to be an end of the birthplace-of-Andrew Jackson controversy. It recurs again and again, and it has been difficult to keep the peace between the dwellers on the north and the south sides of the line which divides the North from the South State. This is especially true of the head-headed descendants of the Scotch settlers of Mecklenburg and the impulsive people down about Columbia and Charleston. The argument in regard to the birthplace of Jackson waxes heated and the spectators hold their breath when Charlotte and Columbia, or Charlotte and Charleston, resume the endless discussion as to whether "Old Hickory" was a native of North or South Carolina. There may be sufficient evidence in hand at present to settle the dispute, from the standpoint of historical truth, and if not at present it may be found later, but settling the matter from the standpoint of true history does not satisfy, and never will satisfy, the people of the two States. Andrew Jackson will always remain a North Carolinian to the people of this State and South Carolinians will ever swear that his place of nativity has been definitely located in that State.

The Columbia State, which has had much to do with keeping alive this unseemly discussion, has discovered and presents new evidence to show that General Jackson was a South Carolinian. Apparently, this evidence is presented for the particular benefit of the Mecklenburgers. Says the State:

"The tribe of detractors of General Andrew Jackson who, since his death, have tried to deprive him of the honor, that he so much cherished, of having been born in South Carolina, will scoffingly say that the fact simile of the letter of the General to Governor Hammond, in which he speaks of his 'native State, South Carolina,' proves nothing. They will chorus that no one disputes that General Jackson thought he was a South Carolinian and that at least eight documents in which he employed words to that purport are in existence.

"Nevertheless, it seems right and expedient that the letter, in the handwriting of the General and sometime President, over his signature, be printed for the illumination of the minds of the Daughters of the Revolution, of Mecklenburg, North Carolina, innocent victims of the heretical and malign teachings of the Charlotte Observer and the Charlotte Chronicle.

"These good and patriotic women, thus led astray, have lately caused a stone to be erected in North Carolina, reciting that it marks the spot on which General Jackson was born. We have no purpose of arguing the question with them, or any other question with any other good woman or set of good women, but we believe that when they read the letter to Governor Hammond, writ with the General's own hand, and perceive the outstanding pride with which he spoke of South Carolina, his native State, they will not fail to perceive, also, with what indignation he would have repelled the accusation that he was born in North Carolina.

"When these good and noble but now deluded women, reading between the lines, are thus impressed, as perforce they must be, they will repent then what they have done and proceed to have the face of the stone planed smooth again and then have the stone itself removed to the spot in Lancaster county where General Jackson first saw the light. A new inscription, quoting from the letter, may then be engraved upon the stone.

"The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, we believe, and the Richmond Times-Dispatch are acquainted with the sayings of the late General Jackson concerning his nativity but the image of his hand-writing in a letter protesting his innocence of nativity anywhere else save South Carolina, in words of iron positiveness which he was wont to use, will arouse them to cry aloud and spare not and smite until the going down of the sun the un-makers and undoers of history and biography.

"Anyway, the letter photographically reproduced in The State and lent to The State by Capt. James H. Hammond, the grandson of its recipient, will, we are persuaded, prove not less convincing than the stone set up by patriotic but impulsive Daughters of Mecklenburg whose perceptions have been blunted by the vain repetitions of our Charlotte contemporaries."

THE VIEWS OF SENATOR KENYON.

Some of the views of Senator W. S. Kenyon, the newly elected Iowa representative to the upper branch of the United States Congress, in regard to matters of public interest, were spoken a few days ago in an address delivered to the people of his home town, Fort Dodge, Iowa. The people of Iowa are much better acquainted with the views of Senator Kenyon than are the people of other States, and even they possibly do not understand fully just what the man who is to succeed Senator LaFayette Young stands for all along the line of public problems, policies and political principles, as he has not been very largely in the political limelight in the past. Therefore, the views of Senator Kenyon were doubtless of particular interest to his constituents, and they are worth the consideration of other citizens who wish to get a line on the probable attitude of the Iowan.

Ex-Senator Young is a pronounced stand-patter in his political views. He is a reactionary of the emphatic type. His election to the Senate, after serving the time for which he was appointed, would have been sufficient evidence of the fact that Iowa had receded from the progressive position which she has been occupying as a Republican State for several years; but Iowa did not elect Senator Young; instead she sends to the Senate a young man whose expressed views indicate that he is a progressive of a type pronounced and aggressive.

In his speech to his home folks Senator Kenyon announced that one of his first acts in the United States Senate will be to seek to have adopted an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law changing the punishment for violations of its provisions to a jail sentence. From the point of view of some of his Iowa fellow citizens and also from the standpoint of many of his fellow citizens of other States this doubtless appears to be an extreme and radical proposition. To inflict a jail sentence upon a man of sufficient consequence in the business world to be convicted of violating the Sherman anti-trust law would be rank discrimination against the elect, from the point of view of these gentlemen. Jail sentences should be imposed upon small and insignificant offenders. They were never intended for men of position and power. However, Senator Kenyon, utterly ignoring the consequences of his rash determination, says he proposes to attempt to have the Sherman law changed in this respect.

Senator Kenyon said further that he was firm in the belief that Senator Lorimer, of Illinois, should be ousted from the senate, because the investigation of the scandal had convinced him that Lorimer, "knowingly or not, had obtained his seat through a general scheme of fraud and corruption, and should be removed. If the people of Iowa and the nation do not indorse my vote on that subject, I will be glad to resign my position and settle down on my farm.

"I have studied to some extent the records in the investigation of Senator Lorimer, of Illinois. It is my conviction that the investigation shows a general scheme of fraud and corruption sufficient to vitiate the election.

"I would rather spend the next two years in the senate and never compromise or trim on a public question than to remain there twenty years by processes of compromise and trimming. Backbone is more essential to our politics than wishbone. The contest today is a people's contest, and the political philosophy that appeals to me more than any mere discussion of the tariff schedules is for laws looking to human rights."

Senator Kenyon is plain spoken. There should be no difficulty in any quarter in understanding what his position is with reference to the matters he discussed. Especially impressive is his declaration that he prefers two years of the right sort of record in the Senate to twenty years devoted to making the wrong sort of record. If he is sincere and honest in his declarations, and there is every reason to believe he is, Senator Kenyon should prove a strong factor in the Senate, as the representative of the great State of Iowa. There is need in the Senate of more men of Kenyon's character and ideas, and there is a field of effort there in which men of his stamp ought to be able to make themselves effective for the good of the country. Senator Kenyon talks like a man who proposes to make good, and the honest voters of the country of all parties will doubtless note his career from time to time with satisfaction and approval.

The Senatorial Primary.

Senator Simmons announces that he is in favor of a primary to settle the senatorial contest that is brewing in this State. The Senator could not afford to take any other position, even had he desired to do so, for, as he points out in his announcement, he was chosen in a primary when he was first elected to the Senate. Governor Kitchen urged upon the Legislature the enactment of a State-wide primary law, and he of course is willing to submit his candidacy to a primary. So it may be regarded as settled that a primary will be ordered for the senatorial candidates, at least. Whatever one may think of the primary generally, it is the best solution of the senatorial matter. If this question was to be fought out in each country over the nomination of candidates for the Legislature, it would result in serious harm, with a strong possibility of a Republican Legislature; and it is absolutely fair to give the Democratic voters an opportunity to say what they want.—Statesville Landmark.

OUT-OF-TIME PEOPLE

By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

It has sometimes occurred to me that a possible reason of many of the woes of some poor creatures is that they are completely out of time and place; that they do not belong to this generation or to this era; they were unlucky at the outset, in that they reached this planet some thousands of years after all their kindred souls had passed away.

They belonged to the times of the augurs; to the times when adventures were undertaken by the direction of the smoke of sacrifice or the position of the entrails of animals; to the time when fortune had her altars, and men invoked good luck with burnt offerings and poured libations to prevent its opposite; to the epoch of superstition between those two great flights of birds, one of which directed Romulus to Rome and the other directed Columbus to America. They are still the devotees of small credulity, and certainly are foreign to the age and the latitudes of civilization.

It is not, of course, impossible that, in all the complications of the innumerable threads that hold the worlds in order, there should be some found running at cross purposes through unwise human intervention, that there should be born individuals the currents of whose lives may run counter to the great currents of the universe; but since there is a deep and everlasting law to control the things of creation, and reconcile disturbances, and a wise disposer of events, such variations are, to say the least, unlikely; and it seems to us, after all, about time for a general declaration of disbelief in the existence of any such thing as luck. "It is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings," the great poet of humanity tells us, and reason confesses the truth of the statement. The person who is in earnest is never unlucky.

This is a world of equations and equivalents, and every serious effort has its balancing power of success.

One Conductor Helped Back to Work.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes: "I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism and used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect. The third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." It clears the blood of uric acid. Howard Gardner.

The busiest little things ever made are Dr. King's New Life Pills. Every pill is a sugar-coated globe of health, that changes weakness into strength, languor into energy, brain-fag into mental power; curing Constipation, Headache, Chills, Dyspepsia, Malaria. Only 25c at Fariss-Klutznick Drug Co.

FADS OF FASHIONS

Flat rosette and bow shapes in ribbon figure among the favored hair ornaments for girls.

The over blouse of chiffon is now embroidered with beads of mingled bright colors.

Dull jet enameled lorgnette chains, buckles, etc., are chosen for wear with mourning attire.

Double edge white marquisette banding for trimming summer dresses is worked with straight upright lines of white dots, all outlined with black shadow effect.

Black chantilly bands embroidered with silver 7800c... $65040 with silver and interspersed with fillet medallions also worked with silver are in the stores.

A trig chambray dress with checked gingham in the bottom of the kimono waist and the graduated bands of the skirt is shown. There is sailor collar.

Coats are short, about 24 inches, although some of them run to 32, and others have no length to speak of, since they are Eton form.

White woollens, white silks and the wash stufs are being exploited by all the leading retail houses and indorsed by the fashionable women.

The velvet bag is enjoying a well merited revival. Indeed, it is rapidly pushing the gold and silver mesh one from first place in popular favor.

Usually the raised line at the waist is effected by means of a semi-belt which appears across the back, disappears over the hips and is in evidence again across the front.

On all tailored types of garments, skirts will remain in narrow lines. The hobble is a thing of the past. The lines are long, scant, but by no means ungraceful. Some of the recent models show plaits introduced on either side of the gores at knee depth.

Saved His Mother's Life.

"Four doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., "and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. I will always praise them." Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c. at Fariss-Klutznick Drug Co.

Samuel Birch, of Bestown, Wis., had a most narrow escape from losing his leg, as no doctor could heal the frightful sore that developed, but at last Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured it completely. Talk to Mothers.

There is need in the home for cuts, bruises, sores and sprains, children and others are heirs to a real good antiseptic liniment, one which will not burn and hurt worse than the wound itself, and which will give the greatest relief and prevent scars. Vick's Liniment is prepared for this purpose. Take this suggestion from a trained druggist who knows.

Employer—Well, Smith, you've been with us 60 years; I'm afraid you'll have to leave us now.

Smith—If I'd known this wasn't going to be a steady job, blessed if I'd a come.

An Accomplished Romeo.

The elder Wallace once played in a romantic drama in which, after taking an impassioned leave of the heroine, he had to leap on a horse which stood just in the wings and then dash across the stage.

Wallace objected to this nightly gallop, and it was arranged that one of the supers who closely resembled the actor should make the ride. He was accordingly dressed exactly like Wallace and sent to the theater in the afternoon to rehearse. He carried off his part well, and the stage manager departed.

But the super was not satisfied and complained to a young member of the company who happened to be present. "Why, see here," he said, "that thing is too easy! A man with a wooden leg could do it with his eyes shut! I used to be in the circus. Couldn't I stand up on this here equine and do a few stunts?"

"Certainly!" exclaimed the other. "That would be all right. Go ahead!" "You think the old party wouldn't object?" said the super doubtfully.

"Object!" replied the player. "Why, he'd be tickled! Do it!"

That evening when the critical point was reached Wallace was gratified to see his counterpart standing ready beside the horse.

"Love, good night—good night!" cried the hero, preparing to drop over the edge of the balcony. "Stay!" cried the heroine, clinging round his neck. "You ride perhaps to death!"

"Nay, sweet, say not so; I ride to honor! With thoughts of thee in my heart no harm can come! Good night—good night!"

He tore himself from her frantic embrace and dropped out of sight of the audience. "Go!" he hissed to the man.

As the horse leaped forward onto the stage the fellow gave a mighty vault and alighted standing on its bare back. Then he leaped into the air, turned a somersault, landed on the horse's back, and bounded lightly to the stage.

It is recorded that the audience applauded tumultuously, but the remarks of Wallace were unfortunately lost.

A Spring Suggestion by a Trained Druggist.

Appendicitis and many other ills come from Constipation and over-loading with food which the system cannot care for. The bowels must be cleared and antiseptized to give their normal functions and this should not be done by strong Cathartics, as every physician will tell you. Vick's Little Liver Pills have been the bowels and mild stimulation to the lazy liver and thus cure trouble in adults or children.

Midnight In The Ozarks

and yet sleepless Hiram Seranton, of Clay City, Ill., coughed and coughed. He was in the mountains on the advice of five doctors, who said he had consumption, but found no help in the climate, and started home. Hearing of Dr. King's New Discovery, he began to use it. "I believe it saved my life," he writes "for it made a new man of me, so that I can now do good work again." For all lung diseases, coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, croup, whooping cough, hay fever, hemorrhages, hoarseness or quinsy, its the best known remedy. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A LARGE CONTRACT

What Howard Gardner Wants Every Person in Greensboro to Do.

When Howard Gardner, the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases that they would have a good many packages returned. But although he has sold hundreds of bottles, not one has been brought back.

To those suffering with dizziness, headache, poor digestion, constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific offers quick relief. It is an invaluable boon to all who feel uncomfortable after eating, and is today the popular dinner pill in all the large cities.

Softly—By Jove, old fellow, when a man's in love he begins to think that his eyes are open for the first time! Sympathising Friend—Yes, and when it's all over he sometimes has the same sensation.

GOOD NATURE.

A good-natured word and a sunny bright smile Will help the rude world o'er the road's rugged mile; When often the anger retard it, instead Of being of service to put it ahead.

The captains of industry haven't much time For good-natured smiling, with ripples of rhyme; But when it's all over and summed at the end, Good nature has won every triumph, my friend.

Oh, business cries out from its turret and tower; We do not want smiling, the thing we want's power; But back of all business good nature smiles on, And the toil of the world lifts its heart to the dawn!

A good-natured deed—ah, it's good nature way, A good-natured word as you toil through the day; A good-natured deed—ah, it's good nature still

That's back of the load helping push up the hill!

Caretul.

"Do try to be good." "I mustn't try." "Why?" "I might succeed." "Well?" "That would ruin my reputation."

Her Estimate.

"Isn't she a dear?" "She is too much of an extremist." "Extremist. How is that?" "She'd use a sledge hammer to break an egg and a cambric needle to pitch hay to an elephant."

The Only Explanation.

"Mr. and Mrs. Brown are on excellent terms." "You don't tell me!" "They are, really." "When were they divorced?"

The Reason.

"I suppose he has many enemies?" "No; I think not." "That's queer." "Not at all. His wife is an orphan with no relatives."

Defined.

"Is she smart?" "I don't know. It doesn't matter. She is a swell looker, which is a substitute most any girl would sigh for."

One Exception.

"All the world loves a winner." "It isn't unanimous." "No?" "No; there's the loser, you know."

Artistic Stage Women Make Barbaric Costumes the Fashion.

Two clever women of the stage, Miss Mary Garden, the prima donna, and Miss Ethel Wynne Matthison, the actress who appears in "The Arrow Maker," have succeeded in so adapting the inharmonies of the redskin costume that they appeal to the eye of the paleface. In both these plays the pie

If you contemplate ordering a new street dress consider well the features of the new tailored frocks that are being shown by those who cater to advanced tastes in fashion. Notice the shortness of the coats, many of which are sloped from the front after the manner of a cutaway coat. Large buttons—two or three, perhaps five—will keep the front of the coat closed, while collars are more ample than ever.

turesque possibilities of Indian life are made the most of. Not only are the costumes singularly pleasing and graceful, but the stage fittings are so artistic as to insure Indian decorations becoming a fad. Indian baskets, robes, Indian pottery, tomahawks, quivers, bunches of arrows, beadwork, feather headresses, all may be made to play a part in designing an Indian decoration.

A well known literary woman whose husband's business takes him frequently through the west and into the reservation country has had her hall fixed up with the various Indian souvenirs which he has gathered. Recently she gave an Indian luncheon in which a miniature tepee made of bark was set on a bank of moss in the center of the table. Over it vines were trailed, and the edge was set off with a rather flat arrangement of low growing ferns. The place cards and souvenirs carried out the Indian idea.

"The joke the fellow sprung."

For the Children

Father Penguin, Who Lives in London's Zoo.

Not long ago a pair of penguins at the London zoo became the parents of a baby penguin. Penguins are seldom seen in captivity, so the advent of the baby was a matter of great interest to naturalists and the public generally. The penguin's home is in the southern hemisphere, and they live amid the ice. The wings have only rudimentary quills and are used as paddles. The young are born covered with down, but are very helpless and require to be tended for a long period in the nest. The food of penguins consists exclusively of fish, which the birds capture beneath the surface by their agility in swimming and diving, when their paddle-like wings serve them to good purpose. So thoroughly at home are they in the water that they at first glance are often mistaken for dolphins or porpoises.

Sequels to "Mother Goose."

A rhyming game with plenty of chances for fun in it is here described. Before your guests arrive take as many sheets of paper as there are to be guests. At the top of each sheet write the last stanza of a nursery rhyme, a different one on each paper—for example:

When she got there
The cupboard was bare,
And so the poor dog had none.
You will probably need a copy of "Mother Goose" to refer to. When the guests have arrived a pencil and one of the papers with a verse at the top are given to each, and they are told that the point of the game is to write a sequel to the nursery rhyme each will find on his paper, the time allotted being half an hour. When time is up the papers are collected and the verses read aloud. A prize for the best rhyme may be given by a committee on awards, chosen from among the players. Here is an example:
The dog was distressed,
Had a pain in his chest,
Because of his hunger and thirst.
He howled out his woes,
Then turned up his toes.
Disappointment his poor heart had burst.

Remarkable Fish.

The curiously named trigger fish are plentiful in Japanese waters. They are of the balistes genus, and their popular name is derived from the trigger-like peculiarity of the second spine of the dorsal fin. When the fin is erected the first ray, or spine, which is very thick and strong, maintains its elevated position so firmly that it cannot be pressed down by any degree of force, but if the second spine is pressed the first immediately falls down with a spring, like the hammer of a gunlock when the trigger is pulled. These fish are marked in a striking manner, some of them being very richly colored—ashen gray, blue and gold.

A Boy's Queer Tumble.

Lloyd Skinner climbed up the stone face of the dam at Electric lake, in New Jersey, and when he had reached the top he fell down to the bottom. This is a bad habit that some boys can never break themselves of. Lloyd did more than fall. As he passed a jagged rock his coat caught, and it was taken off his back as neatly as if somebody had tried to hold him up by the ends of the sleeves. By the time he reached the end of his fall he had lost a shoe as well. In return for these losses he received a large black and blue bruise on his back, but otherwise his thirty foot tumble did not do him much harm.

A Water Trick.

Fold your napkin into the form of a cravat and request some one of the company to fill up your glass with water and place it on your napkin; cover your glass with a hollow plate; cover again the plate with the two ends of the napkin in such a fashion that the glass will be tightly pressed against the plate, and turn the whole upside down. It is now easy to drink the liquid, which comes down gently into the plate, and hence you can readily wager to drink a glass of water without touching your glass with your hands or mouth.

Cradle Song.

Hush thee, baby, night is near;
One bright star is shining clear;
Now the moon, a silver bow,
Hangs above our cottage low.
Hush thee, baby, close thine eyes;
Darker grow the evening skies.
Hush thee, baby, mother knows
Way to land of sweet repose.
She will guide thee safely there
Over poppy blossoms fair.
Hush thee, baby, sleep and dream
While the stars above thee gleam.

Hush thee, baby; wondrous sweet
Are thy dimpled hands and feet.
Wondrous dear thy sunny face,
Pure and perfect in its grace.
Sleep, oh, sleep, the whole night long;
Shining angels round thee throng.

Dogs in Harness in Belgium.
Dogs that work in Belgium are bought and sold in the open market like horses, and if strong and well broken they bring from $20 to $25 each. In manufacturing towns there is the usual number of horses, but for every horse you will see two dogs in harness on the streets. Early in the morning market women drive them hitched to carts loaded down with vegetables. The grocer, the expressman, the butcher and baker, all employ dogs to do the work of horses. They are much quicker than the horse, and size for size they can draw a heavier load. It is said the dog in harness will go twice as far as the horse within the same time. They are driven in wagons, single, double, treble and four-in-hand. They are often kept in livery barns like horses, are fed generally on black bread and horseflesh and cost in board from 5 to 6 cents per day. They are sleek and well kept and appear to enjoy their work.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Drop of Water.

Figures are sometimes impressive simply by being so stupendous that the human mind grasps them with difficulty. An instance in point is afforded by the illustration once offered to his hearers by an eminent scientist, who, in order to bring to their comprehension the idea of ultimate particles of water, stated that if he was to empty a tumbler containing half a pint of water, letting out each second a number equal to 1,000 times the population of the earth, it would require somewhere between 7,000,000 and 47,000,000 years to empty the tumbler. Lord Kelvin has assured us that if a drop of water was magnified to the size of the earth the particles would be between the size of cricket balls and footballs. If that statement is correct the drops of water in all the oceans are not many times so numerous as the particles, or molecules, in a single drop.—St. Louis Republic.

When Baronets Were Bold.

It was in the reign of good King James that baronets first came into existence. Today you could hardly tell a baronet from a banker. But in the year 1611, when James I. needed ready money and created 200 "little barons" to supply him with cash, they swagged about in their badrics and sashes and behaved in the courtliest of fashion. Each baronet in order to justify his title had to maintain a small army of thirty soldiers for three years. In this way the crafty king not only increased his revenue, but actually lightened his expenses. It is not generally known that the title of "baronetess" has twice been bestowed on women. One of these was the mother of a Dutch general. The other was a Nottingham lady named Dame Maria Bolles, who won her way into the good graces of Charles I. and received the title from his hands.—London Tit-Bits.

REDFERN

Demonstration
All This Week!

Correct Corsetting by a professional corsetier, is the feature of our Corset Shop News. The professional comes from the chief designing rooms where the

Redfern Whalebone Models

are conceived, designed and executed. She will confer with you regarding the modeling of your figure to the season's requirements, and the merits of the REDFERN which, in our humble opinion, is not equaled in the Corset world.

The Change Corsetically this season is apparently slight, but it is most important. The length of the corset is unchanged, a trifle lower in the bust—the hip line and waist curve must be most exact—accuracy in shaping is due in a degree to proper adjusting.

THE REDFERN is a genuine Whalebone Corset. This is a good deal to say in these days when whalebone is high and scarce at that, and what is more when substitutes are no rarity, the corset boned with a substitute claiming to be just as good as a pure whalebone corset, which is impossible, as whalebone is unequalled for its resiliency and shaping power—no substitute has ever taken its place.

NO ACTION

Regarding Mexican Situation Will Be Taken at Present by the President.

By Publishers' Press.
Washington, April 18.—In view of the evacuation of Agua Prieta by the insurgents there is no present intention on the part of President Taft to send a special message to Congress about the Mexican situation. Leaders of both parties state that Congress will not act until that body hears officially from the President.

Every message concerning Mexico, whether official or not, is sent to President Taft. Definite assurances have been received from the Mexican government that the affair at Agua Prieta will not be repeated. The announcement is made at the White House that Mexico has given assurances of "Definite restrictive policy on the border."

TAFT WELCOMES MEMBERS D. A. R. TO NATIONAL CAPITAL

Washington, April 18.—Various general officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution submitted their annual reports to the twentieth Continental Congress of that body this morning. The session of the forenoon was taken up exclusively with these reports.

Among those heard were Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, chairman of the national board of management and service; Mrs. Miranda B. Bulloch, in charge of organization of chapters, and the chaplain general, Mrs. Esther Frothingham Noble. All the reports showed excellent progress had been made during the year just closed.

The entire day, from the opening session in the morning, when President Taft welcomed the Daughters of the National Capital, was one of busy preparation for the real work of the congress, which will begin tomorrow and last throughout the week.

Mrs. Scott introduced President Taft as "the greatest ruler of the greatest nation of the world," adding that the Daughters of the American Revolution is the "greatest organization of women in the world."

The usefulness of the organization, whose object is the preservation of patriotic spirit and the bringing to the minds of a busy present the memorials of the past, cannot be exaggerated," said the President. "I congratulate you that you have accomplished so much in that direction."

Mrs. Scott, in her annual address, declared that it was the ancestors of the Daughters of the American Revolution "who, although they little realized it, were preparing the way for the greatest peace movement possible," for after the American revolution the question of peace or war rested ultimately with the people.

Good form

Duties of a Parlor Maid.

A parlor maid is expected to take charge of the parlors and dining room and lower halls of a house only. There is apt to be a butler or a waitress in the establishments where a parlor maid is kept, so the duties of waiting on the table do not come within her province.

She is always neatly clad in the morning in a plain light gingham dress, with an apron with shoulder straps, and bib and wears a cap. In the afternoon she wears a black dress with apron, collar, cuffs and cap. After she rises in the morning she dusts the parlors, halls and all the rooms on the lower floor. When she has eaten breakfast she begins the regular work, which is planned a little differently for each household.

On one morning she sweeps the parlor, on another the library, and so on during the week. In the afternoon the maid must be ready to open the front door if the butler is dressing or occupied with some afternoon work. She may bring in afternoon tea, and in a family where there are children she very often gets their supper and waits on them in their own dining room or at their special table.

If there is a governess in the family it is the duty of the parlor maid to see that her meals are properly served. In a small establishment a parlor maid is usually a waitress also. She then has charge of the dining room and parlors and all of the lower part of the house, but does nothing upstairs. She opens the front door and is expected to be always neatly dressed and immaculate, so she has her laundry work done for her and has no heavy, rough work to do. She is not expected to wash windows or clean the sidewalks and front steps.

Dressing by System.

One of the best dressed women in Paris has a rule that she follows in choosing her clothes which has made her wardrobe the success that it is. Perhaps some girl who is planning her spring outfit may profit by her suggestions.

Says the clever Frenchwoman: "I buy only four new gowns a year. I get one in the spring, one in the summer, another in the autumn and the last in the winter. In these gowns, too, I specialize. I let each represent a class. One year I will get a good tailored suit, an evening dress, a fine negligee, perhaps, and so on. Another year I will choose a morning gown, an afternoon frock, a dance dress, and, of course, if necessary, have some remodeling done to last year's wardrobe. In this way I have a good toilet for every occasion."

"Then I spend the rest of my allowance on the smartest and best neckwear, veils, gloves, stockings and other little things that I can afford. These dress et cetera, if they are dainty and smart, count more for effect in the long run than fine dresses without them. If you can't have both get plain or conservative suits and dresses and add chic and vary their monotony with little things. Hats, veils, neck ties and gloves have a lot to do with the smartness of one's appearance. An expensive suit with the wrong hat doesn't look half so well as a less costly suit with the right hat."

The second is by Col. W. L. McGhee, commissary general and is for the second highest individual record. There is the keenest sort of interest in the impending contest.

Deputy Collector Adams of the internal revenue service says he has averaged seizing three blockade stills per week for several weeks now and that the indications are that he will maintain some such a record for some time to come from the way information coming in as to material to work on. He says blockading has for a long while been confined to some remote and more inaccessible sections but that it is spreading.

ing into all parts of the State now with remarkable rapidity. He believes blockading has multiplied several times of late and that it is getting at the same time, to be more and more difficult to get up with the blockaders actually at work. They dodge about and have friends on the alert so that by the time officers get in their vicinity the still disappears and evidence as to the identity of blockaders is hard to obtain. He says the officers, however, keep hammering at the situation and he believes they will be able before a great while to cope more fully with the situation.

JUST Rheumacide IT CURES

Rheumatism and Blood Diseases
The cause of Rheumatism is excess uric acid in the blood. To cure rheumatism this acid must be expelled from the system. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with oils and liniments may ease the pain, but they will not change the fiber of rotten wood.
Cures Rheumatism To Stay Cured.
Science has discovered a perfect and complete cure called Rheumacide. Tested in hundreds of cases, it has effected
the cause, gets at the joints from the

No, they do not, but Herpicide does,

How He Came Home

The Beginning and the End of His Sin

By CLARISSA MACKIE
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The street lay in shadow, for heavy clouds obscured the young moon. A clock in the distance struck 2, and down at the corner, where a broad avenue intersected the quiet street, a policeman swung on his heels and vanished down the lighted way.

Out of the darkness of the street
there evolved the shadow of a man that became substance when he had slipped into a dark alleyway, skillfully forced the door and entered a little hall. He locked the door behind him and turned on the faintest glimmer of light from his pocket lamp.

With a nod of satisfaction he found
the stairs that led up to the first floor.
He slipped a black mask over his face and mounted the steps. Under his feet ran the soft, thick carpet of a long hall. He knew this type of house—there should be a door front
and back leading to the street and yard respectively—and calculated his getaways.

The narrow beam of his lamp found
the door of the dining room, and he entered, closing it noiselessly behind him. The sideboard showed an array of rather old fashioned silver. He looked at it critically, weighing some of the pieces in his hand, all the time conscious that there was a certain familiarity in their outlines. Their recognition came as a blow in the face.

This was his mother's silver! What was it doing here? What had he done?

The stairs creaked ominously, and he shut off the light and slipped into the hall that he might be close to the rear door.

He could hear the soft rustle of a woman's gown and the light tread of

LIFTED HER GENTLY.

slipped feet on the stairs. Then came her voice, anxiously low:

"Raymond!" she called softly.
That was his name, but he did not answer. Instead he seemed to shrink against the wall, and his hands covered his masked face.

"Raymond—ah, I thought perhaps it was Raymond. James said he would come back some day," she sighed and then uttered a slight exclaima-tion of pain. There came a muffled, stumbling sound. "Oh, dear! My ankle again!" Then silence.

The man swept the mask from his face and crammed it in his pocket.
He tiptoed down the length of the hall to the stairs, where a white object blurred against the darkness. He understood the situation at once. His mother had a weak ankle. She had sprained it once more and fainted
from the pain.

With trembling arms he groped for
and found her slender form and lifted her gently. Her soft hair brushed his cheek, and he gnawed his lips to still their quivering. Slowly he mounted the stairs with his burden and carried her into a front room where a night
lamp burned dimly.

He could see that the last three years had aged her pitifully. Her face was worn into thin lines and deprived of its pretty color. Her gray hair lay in a heavy braid over her shoulder, and his lips touched it as he bent above her. Then her eyes opened wider and with unutterable joy
in their depths.

"Raymond! It was you after all!
You have come back!" she cried. "My son! My son!"
He knelt beside the bed and submitted his face to her tender scrutiny.
She kissed him and crooned over him
as if he was the baby she had worshipped. The three years since his disappearance from home had left their mark upon his countenance, and she tried to kiss the alien marks away.

"Your father will be so happy! He has always said you would come back," she whispered.

"Where is dad?" he asked huskily.

"He went to Albany this morning.
He said he might return very late, so I did not sit up for him. It must be nearly morning. I don't believe he is coming. Tell me about yourself, dear.
Why did you go? Your father did not mean to be so harsh with you. He would have forgiven you, Raymond."

The young man told her in broken sentences of his angry flight from home after the quarrel with his father, of his journey to the Yukon country, his unsuccessful search for gold, the long winters, the return by various stages. Now he was here.

He skipped all the period that had elapsed since his return to New York;
how he had drifted around the great city confident that his parents were still living in the suburban town where he had been born. He did not tell her that little by little he had slipped on the downward path until a sense of honesty had been blunted so that at last he could enter the house of a stranger and steal his valuables. This was his first attempt—and he had entered
the house of his own father!

She did not hear any of this as he stepped to and fro, deftly bandaging
her swollen ankle, covering her with the silken quilt, administering a few drops of her favorite cordial as he had been wont to do when he was at home.
At last he was sitting beside her once more. The gray dawn was sifting through the windows and showed his face softened and glowing. "When did you leave Springside?" he asked at last.

"A year ago. Your father felt that he would be nearer his business—and it was dull in Springside." Raymond understood. They had come to New York, for there was a greater chance of seeing him if he should be there in that maelstrom of waifs and strays from the world.

He asked after one and another of old friends. At last he spoke hesitatingly, "Elsie Dearborn—what has become of her, mother?"

Her hand pressed his. "Just the same as ever. She has been like a dear daughter to us. Why, Raymond, she is in the house this very moment. I forgot." She sat up in sudden excitement.

"Elsie here—in this house? I must go away, mother," he said, in a panic.
"No, no! You will stay. You must stay till your father returns. I thought you had come home for good," she wailed tearfully.

"I have, I have—if dad will let me—
after he has heard my story. But I can't see Elsie—not yet. Don't ask me to." He hid his face in her breast,
and she soothed him gently. "Hark!
I believe I hear your father's step.
Stay and meet him here," she pleaded.

"I cannot, mother dear. I must tell him something first, and then if he wants me to stay I will never leave you again. I shall come back before I leave the house, don't fear. I'll go down now and get it over."

He laid her gently down on the pillows and, slipping from the room, closed the door softly behind him. He blinked in the red light that suddenly flooded the upper hall, and then he stood stunned and silent before a small slim girl clad in dressing gown and slippers.

"Elsie!" he said after a long silence,
during which her beautiful gray eyes
had never left his face.

"Raymond, it is you!" she whispered.
"Why, I thought it was your ghost—I I have looked for you so long." Her voice quavered into silence, and she dropped her lips against her clasped hands.

He started down the stairs, his head
bent dejectedly.

"Raymond!" the girl breathed sharply.

"Yes?" He turned toward her.
"Can't I go down with you—stand beside you when you tell him—shoulder
to shoulder, the way we used to play
when he was a child?"

"Don't! You cannot understand. You couldn't have anything to do with me,"
he groaned.

"Is it so bad as that?" she asked in
an awed tone.

"Yes."
"Then you need me all the more,"
she said quickly, and then she was close behind him as he made his slow
progress down the long hall to the library door, where a long finger of light
shot through the crack in the doorway.

The elderly white haired man standing by the table looked up as the door pushed open. His dim eyes brightened, and he raised a hand to his heart.

"Raymond, my son!" he said, holding out his arms.

But the young man hung back. "Not yet, dad—not until I have told you something." He looked pleadingly at the girl, but she shook her head.

"I ought to know, too, Judge Ely,"
she said, with quiet dignity.

The judge nodded his head. "Tell us, Raymond, and be done with it. I want to embrace my son." His voice broke.

Raymond's head lowered, and his face reddened to scarlet. "It is soon told," he said despondently. "I've gone from bad to worse, and I didn't know this was your house—and I came here this morning—look!" He drew from his pocket the black mask and the electric lamp and laid them on the table. "Mother heard me and came down. She sprained her ankle, and I carried her upstairs, and she recognized me. I will go away. Perhaps I can come back when I have done better." He turned toward the door.

Elsie was crying softly against his shoulder. His father's arms closed about them both. From above stairs
he heard the loving voice of his mother calling to him. After that moment
no one could shake Raymond Ely's belief in God's unutterable love.

"Think of how I entered your house,
father!" he protested.
"The only thing that matters is that you came. How you came does not count," said his father joyfully.

Cookery Points

Cheese Parties Popular.

One of the favorite amusements
among young people just now is what they term "cheese parties." A young lady desirous of entertaining her friends very informally invites about a dozen of her "intimates" to spend the evening with her and partake of a Welsh rabbit. One of the peculiar charms of this entertainment is "the come and go early" plan, so every one is on hand by 8 or shortly after.

The hostess must have one pound of fresh, dry cheese (any grocer will give the proper kind), cut into small pieces
and placed in the chafin dish. Salt, mustard, cayenne, butter and a bottle
of ale or beer with the cheese, light the little lamp and allow the mixture to become partially warmed and soft before calling the guests into the dining room.

Then add, when the cheese is somewhat melted, four teaspoonfuls of butter, four small teaspoonfuls of mustard, two teaspoonfuls of salt and a little pepper. Thin it well and cook until it thickens, being careful not to let it curdle. Some experts consider an egg necessary, but many do not think it an improvement. Half a slice of bread or toast should be ready on a plate for each person. When the "rabbit" is cooked, serve a tablespoonful
on each plate.

The beverage for the evening is usually good strong coffee. The small,
square sea foam crackers, buttered,
salted and just heated through, are delicious always and especially at a
"cheese party."

The young people do not despise
bowls of popped corn or dishes of candy as a means of occupation until the rabbit is ready for eating. Nothing
jollier is to be imagined than a group
of lively boys and girls seated around
a table, their eyes all fixed on the center of attraction, each with his or her
word of advice in regard to the manner of stirring, length of time required for cooking, etc., until, as the commander in chief inspires confidence,
they turn their attention to cracking
jokes and telling stories while waiting for the result of so much twisting and turning of the silver spoon and fork
in the fast melting cheese.

By 10 or a little later the happy crowd has dispersed, one and all declaring that the evening has been a success, and the hostess may bid them
good night with a smiling face, feeling
sure that each one has had "a real good time."

Corn Doctores.

These cakes, made from the earliest times by the Indians and negroes and baked on leaves or on a hoe in the hot ashes, may be successfully imitated by the modern cook in her up to date
oven.

Take one pint of the genuine southern cornmeal and sift it with one cupful of flour and a teaspoonful of salt.
Scald this with two cupfuls of boiling water or milk in which a rounded tablespoonful of shortening has been melted. This should result in a moist batter, but one sufficiently firm to hold
in place when dropped from a spoon into a well greased baking pan. Two tablespoonfuls of the batter will be enough for each dodger, about three-fourths of an inch in thickness. The cakes may be even smaller if preferred.
To give them the old fashioned southern finish leave the full length imprint
of the finger across the top of each cake. Bake in a moderately hot oven half an hour and eat hot with butter
for breakfast or luncheon. If preferred
the dodgers may be baked on a well greased griddle. Cook slowly and when well browned on one side turn to the other.

For the Tea Table.

A novelty to serve instead of candy
at afternoon tea is made from figs
stuffed with chopped nuts and a fresh marshmallow. The figs are first soaked in brandy, or sherry if preferred, for half a day, then pulled apart and each half lined with the nut and pulled around the marshmallow to make a round ball. The only drawback to this delicious confection
is that it is somewhat "sneaky" to eat.

Tea Cakes.

For individual cakes to serve warm
for tea cream half a cupful of butter
with a scant cupful of sugar. Add half a cupful of sour milk in which a third of a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. Flavor with spice to suit the taste and add enough sifted flour to roll out. Cut into biscuits or bake in muffin tins. An egg may be added if desired.

Shirred Oysters.

Chop twenty-five large oysters fine,
add the beaten yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of cream, sufficient dry breadcrumbs to thicken and salt and pepper to taste. Fill the cleaned shells with this mixture. Put little pieces of butter on top and bake in a quick oven until lightly browned.

Good For Seasonings.

Celery is sometimes very scarce, and a good plan is to save the tops of the celery this time of the year. Cut and wash the nice leaves, tie with a cord and hang up to dry. When dry put them in a paper bag and save for seasoning soups or dressings.

The Widow Again.

"Yes."
"How did it happen?"
"Conserving himself."
"What do you mean?"

marry in this case."

But after that the subject begs

"Doesn't she?"

"How do you know?"
"Cause I asked her to marry me."

Narrow Too.

"Who?"
"Brown."
"Oh, he has to be in order to fit into his conception of life."

Smart Maid.
"Is your mistress in?"
"No, sir."
"When will she be in?"
"I don't know, but I will ask her."

Enforced.
"He is poor, but honest."
"That may be no credit to him."
"Why not?"
"Perhaps he has to be."

On the Job.
"Twice in a prohibition state,
Where drummers meet to grumble,
He put a wink across the plate—
The drugist took a tumble."

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

WHEN a girl has her photograph taken in her very newest gown it does make her furious to be told that she resembles a spinster aunt whom she considers the biggest dowdy of her acquaintance.

No small boy believes that digging
fishworms is so taxing to the strength
as hoeing in the garden.

A man seems possessed to talk about that outrageous paving assessment just when his wife is convinced
in her inmost soul that she must have an Easter outfit.

Many a man has followed a get-rich-
quick scheme into the penitentiary.

Some women's idea of success is getting the wash on the line before
the next door neighbor has had her breakfast.

Life is a tragedy to a girl when the latest fashion book fails to arouse her interest.

When a man makes a fool of himself he usually does a good job.

How would it do to put a tariff on titled foreigners?

A church bazaar will appeal to the religious instincts of a girl much more forcibly than a prayer meeting.

A small baby sometimes can do up
a 200 pound man more quickly than work can.

Sixes and Sevens.
Sometimes perversity of things
Just makes us feel like taking wings
And feeling to some other clime
Where old Dame Trouble all the time
Is not engaged upon a brew
For use of wormwood and of rue;

Where kitchen maids don't go away,
But really seem inclined to stay;
Where bill collectors don't come round
And sirloins maybe ten a pound;
Where coal does not to heights aspire
Till it has fed our furnace fire;

Where pleasure gaily rings the bell
And says she's come to stay a spell;
A lot of things that cheer us not,
Then somehow find a tender spot
And rub and chafe 'till we're insane
And fit to take the bug house train.

But when we come to think it over
We find the things that make us sore
Are often brought about by waste
Of patience plus a lot of haste
To get ahead a little bit
Before the time and place are fit.

THERE is no place like home. This is probably the reason why so many people are never to be found there.

What is on the outside of a girl's head is no clew whatever to what is on the inside.

One way to avoid poverty is to get rich and then die.

Never argue with a woman. She can think of more nonessentials than you can.

No matter how much trouble they have, some people are always willing to take more.

Curious that some people never get rich enough to pay their taxes.

We rarely mean all we say. Life
would be too meaningful if we did.

The thing that a man boasts about
will generally be found to require
some sort of bolstering up.

Scandal that gets no attention isn't scandal.

A good chance comes along occasionally, but somehow doesn't always wear its label.

Self reliance is a virtue sufficient
unto itself—as long as there is no particular need of it.

The man who is out looking for a fight doesn't have to have very good eyesight.

Lost Opportunities.

"She had three proposals before she was twenty."

"And didn't accept any of them?"

"No. She said she was going to take her time."

"And what happened?"

"She is still taking it."

SINGING BEFORE 100,000 PERSONS

Mme. Tetrazzini Tells of Her Wonderful Outdoor Concert in San Francisco—Mother and Children in College Together.

IN the opinion of most music critics, Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini, the famous soprano, retains her title as premier woman singer of the world. In spite of several younger song birds of the highest excellence who have astonished and delighted the world since the Italian singer made her success. She returned recently to New York from a long concert tour which covered the entire United States, as far as the Pacific slope. Speaking of her experiences and referring especially to the wonderful scene in San Francisco when she sang to more than 100,000 persons gathered outdoors on Christmas eve, Mme. Tetrazzini said: "Never in all my life have I had an experience like that of Christmas eve, when I sang for the people in the streets of San Francisco in front of Lotta's fountain. I was almost afraid to do this, although everybody assured me that everything would go all right. But I realized that with so many thousand people it would be very difficult to maintain silence.

"Imagine my feeling when I stepped out on the platform and saw the great sea of faces. The night was calm, not a breath of air stirring. As the mayor introduced me there was one great cheer and then not a sound. There was absolute silence. Never, even in the opera house or concert room, have I felt that so many people were listening intently. You could have heard the song of a bird for several blocks, and my voice carried easily. I sang 'The Last Rose of Summer' and then the waltz from 'Romeo et Juliette.' "On New Year's eve we were in Portland having supper in one of the big restaurants when a man at a neighboring table came up and begged me, with tears in his eyes, to sing 'The Last Rose of Summer.' He said it would mean a great deal to him personally and offered to collect $20 from every man in the room if I would agree to do it. I had to tell him that I was very tired."

FEW MEN NAG, BUT THEY CAN

Probation Officer Rose McQuade Says There Would Be Little Use For Courts if Tongues Were Kept Still.

THAT women nag more than men, but that a man who does not nag can beat any woman at it, is the point reached by Miss Rose McQuade after her many months of work as probation officer in the domestic relations court of New York city. It is Miss McQuade's duty when husband and wife get at such loggerheads that nothing will answer but "a visit to the judge" to visit their home after the case has been postponed for a week and there to quietly interview (separately always) both man and woman, dig out the real causes of the disagreement, give good advice and then report to the judge for his guidance when the case comes up for final adjudication.

It is a great tribute to Miss McQuade's wisdom and "horse sense" that in a majority of cases the final decree of the bench is, "Go home now, both of you, and kiss and make up."

"Quarrels," she says, "are most often provoked by wives who can't learn when to keep silent. A man comes home a little late for dinner or possibly with a drop too much, and his wife begins at once to nag him and sometimes keeps it up for days. If she had the common sense to keep her tongue in bounds it is ten to one he would feel ashamed of himself and make amends next time pay day came around."

"But bad as is the nagging woman," went on Miss McQuade, "she is an angel of light compared to the nagging man. Let me tell you that when a man does set out to nag he can do it more thoroughly and completely than any woman I ever saw."

"I have in mind the case of a woman who is under my charge now. Her husband brought her to court for drinking, but when I investigated, talked to her and visited her home I found that the drink was an effect, not the cause, of unhappiness."

"Her husband was one of those over-particular men who were always raising a fuss because something in the house was not in the right place or there was a spot on one of the children's faces. His wife did the best she could, but she was a big natured woman, who grew impatient under petty faultfinding and in her unhappiness took to drink."

"This man is a special type, whose faults are feminine rather than of his own sex."

"For the serpent's tongue undoubtedly belongs to the female sex. From my observation of husbands and wives I think men are much more willing to admit they have done wrong than women are."

"I find that most women pay too much importance to trifles. How foolish it is to fret because a man doesn't come home until late and then begin to fuss with him as soon as he gets there. Men are often nervous and irritable after a hard day's work, and the best plan in such cases is to let them alone till they get over it."

A MADONNA OF TODAY.

Mothers Finding That Nurses Are Not Indispensable.

If a contest was started for the finding of the most beautiful phrase in English, one would have to go far to find anything more perfect than "mother and babe." The love expressed in the face of the woman, queen or peasant, as she gazes at the cooling little bit of humanity that is her own, her very own, has brought out the world's best masterpieces in art and literature. And beautiful index of the millennium—mother is again becoming baby's companion, and the white capped nurse may soon be forced to seek other means of livelihood.

Women to Fight Blindness.

The San Francisco clubwomen have organized a society for the prevention of blindness. They hope for a national movement similar to that which is now fighting against tuberculosis and which will prevent the blindness caused by insanitary conditions.

SHE EXPECTS TO LIVE A CENTURY

Reasons For Belief Given by Ruth St. Denis, the Dancer.

"I AM going to live to be 100 years old, and I make this statement in all sincerity and truth," says Ruth St. Denis, the well known dancer. "The reason why I'm going to live to be 100 is because I refuse to accept the mandates of fashion, which, in its utter indifference to comfort and health, demands that women garb themselves in clothes which, per se, propagate ill health. I will not wear corsets, the use of which interferes with the natural functions of the body, acts as a barrier to the proper working of the respiratory organs and defeats the purposes for which God intended the pores of the skin. I will continue to be underdressed instead of overdressed and thereby eliminate the dangers of sudden changes in temperature. I will wear loose fitting shoes, that do not tend to interfere with the circulation of the blood in the lower limbs. I will take long breaths, filling every cell in my lungs. I will eat such food as is calculated to make muscle and blood. I will deny myself high spiced cooking. I will follow a diet that made the ancient Egyptians the long lived people they were. In fact, I will get back to nature."

"In the ancient days women were free of ills and ailments and bore large families, and all because they lived temperate lives and wore the same garments in winter as in summer."

"Seventy-five per cent of the women in New York, according to a well known physician, are ill. The hospitals of this city are constantly filled with women patients who must undergo operations, 90 per cent of which are due to their manner of living and the clothes they wear."

"The biggest menace to woman's health is tight lacing, tight shoes, tight clothes, too many clothes and wearing six or seven thicknesses of garments."

around their chest and then going out in the cold in low shoes, thin silk hose, their necks and shoulders bare.

"They take no exercise, do not believe in a constant current of fresh air in their sleeping apartments and have the steam radiators going at full tilt all the time."

"In my declaration of independence as regards dress I will carefully avoid all these things and so conduct my life as to make the most out of it so far as health is concerned, and there is absolutely no reason why I cannot live to be 100 as well as my sisters who thrived in the days of ancient Sparta and ancient Egypt."

School For Husbands Needed.

One of the newest schools to be exploited in Boston is called the Home-making school or School of Matrimony. In it girls are taught the ethics of homemaking. The hours are from 9 to 5 for five days of the week, and the course of instruction includes child study, textiles, sewing, music in the home, household arts, literature and ethics. This is certainly an excellent idea, and many people will wonder why evening classes could not be started for young men in which they might be taught a few things in regard to ethics of the home—child study, home building, etc. It really does seem too bad to have all the education on one side.

London Likely to Establish a Record at the Coming Function.

So far as coronations are concerned, it seems likely that a record will be established in the prices of seats to witness the forthcoming one of King George. Already, it is reported, one window in Piccadilly has been let for 300 guineas.

The coronation of King Edward was, of course, shorn of much of its interest and a great deal of its splendor owing to its unfortunate postponement, and there was a big slump in consequence in the prices originally demanded for the seats.

For that of Queen Victoria the prices demanded were very low according to modern ideas, but then in 1838 we had not yet learned to think in millions. Good seats to view the procession could be had for as low as 5 shillings, and very few were advertised at more than a guinea, even in the choicest positions.

The contrast is startling between these rates and those prevailing at the diamond jubilee. Then as much as 2,000 guineas was asked for a single window overlooking St. Paul's churchyard, and in St. James street single seats were priced at 80 and 100 guineas.

Going further back, we find that the cost of seats to see the coronation procession of George II. averaged about half a guinea apiece, while that of Charles II. could be seen for half a crown.

People paid sixpence a head to see Queen Elizabeth's coronation procession go by, but then sixpence in those days represented a far greater value than it does now, and the same remark applies to the penny, which was the price charged at Richard III.'s coronation.—Pearson's.

THE RISE OF TEXAS.

Promises For the Future Based on Past Performances.

What July 4, 1776, is to the United States in general March 2, 1836, is to Texas. On that day Texas, which was part of Mexico, but which, peopled chiefly by Americans, was as alien to that country in ideas and aspirations as it was in language, declared its independence. And the announcement was quickly put into concrete shape. When Texas became a state it had only about 150,000 population, and in the census of 1850, the first in which it figured, it ranked as the twenty-fifth in number of inhabitants. In 1910 it had 3,896,000 people and grew 27 per cent in the decade.

It promises to be the fourth state in 1920, displacing Ohio, which holds that rank now and which has held it for many years. By 1930 it will, from the recent relative rates of gain, be very close to Illinois, which is the third state, and may become the second state by 1940. Pennsylvania holds that rank now and for many decades. By 1940 it promises to outrun New York and become the emperors state of a republic which by that time may have 200,000,000 people.—Lambert Weekly.
